“ When I visited with Aunt Emily just about a month ago, and wanting to be sure she knew just how much she meant to me, I told her I had a lifetime's worth of "growing up" memories stored from all the time I'd spent with her, Uncle Arthur and my six cousins. And I told her I wouldn't trade those times for anything. Nor would I trade all the later times. I hoped, then, that she knew. And as was so typical of her, she paid me the ultimate compliment when she said: "you know honey, I've always considered you one of my boys and I love you". . . She knew and I knew and nothing more needed to be said.

We will all miss her, each in his or her own way, but how wonderful it was to have had her influence and love in our lives.
