Yes. A fantastic picture. Uncle Wayne always had a silver dollar for me or even a 2 dollar bill. I loved to see him every time the family got together. His laugh, smile, strength, and twinkly eyes had my heart. You are all in my prayers. May the good Lord bring you comfort as you adjust to life here while he lives on in heaven. Love you all dearly.

“ Jon Watson Facebook Tribute:

My grandfather passed away at 5:11am this morning. Thank you for all the prayers. He was a grandfather with few friends and wants, just steady consistent love to give his grand son. He was the definition of an oak. He was the one constant I could run to and know where I stood every time. A man I could have a two hour conversation with or watch tv together and never know the difference. He was so consistent he could be taken for granted for and you didn't even know you had. Nearly all the examples he gave were through actions and not words. His patience with me was never ending. As a teenager I would spout off and rant about how I already had the world figured out and all he would do is smoke his pipe and simply listen. He agreed with me on all points knowing that my thoughts on a particular subject were incorrect and I would soon move on to the next. He was willing to help me move away to the place I now call home that led to me eventually starting my family. His impact on my life was so great that I couldn't even think of being where I am today without him. I will always love you Papa. Thank you for giving me so much when I had so little to give back.

“ He is a bright soul that I can say he was admired for so much in life and deeply appreciated from those who knew him. I recall the first time I met him, he never passed judgement but instead passed knowledge and wisdom. He is someone I can say I am honored to have known.
