“ I had the chance to meet Mrs. Hancock over a year ago. In that time I got to laugh with her and listen to her talk about her husband and family. More than often than not, she had me laughing. I remember the happiness in her eyes and on her face when she told me of a weekend away to Tennessee with her daughter and family. She was so proud and wanted me to see a photo of her in the mountains.

She was dearly loved by her daughter and it was obvious when I came over. Mrs. Hancock's room would be decorated for the holidays or the windows open and the wind blowing the
